AQUILA Launches COVID-19 Austin Real Estate Resource Center

AQUILA's COVID-19 Austin Real Estate Resource Center answers top questions from Austin tenants, landlords, developers and more

AUSTIN, TEXAS – AQUILA Commercial today announced the launch of its COVID-19 Austin Real Estate Resource Center.

The goal of the resource center is to provide answers to the commercial real estate industry and tenants in Austin.

“At AQUILA, it is our goal to always be a resource to our clients and friends,” said Bart Matheney, principal with AQUILA. “We’re publishing the information they need in order to make informed real estate decisions today and tomorrow.”

The resource center is updated two to three times a week. Initial content focused on answering tenant’s questions about rent relief options and the impact of local ordinances on their construction projects.

As the market shifts its focus from immediate relief to long-term strategy, the resources too are now beginning to address broader topics such as workplace trends that are emerging as a result of COVID-19, how to continue marketing and leasing real estate during the pandemic, and more.

“We’ve received positive feedback from our clients about these resources,” said Kristi Svec Simmons, SIOR, principal with AQUILA. “Whether they’re in need of rent relief or not, tenants want to know what their options are. We’ve been glad to be able to be a resource for them through this uncertain time.”

To date, the most popular article is 5 Office Trend Shifts That Will Occur in the Wake of the COVID-19.

In addition to commercial real estate content, AQUILA is including ways to help the Austin community, featuring articles on how to support both local businesses and nonprofits.
